Throngs Fill Local Churches As Memorial to Their Leader

The City of Sierra Madre mourned the sudden death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt in its own sincere way. Most business places other than provision stores closed their doors for the day or during the national services in respect to a great character whom all had learned to esteem. The churches of the city were filled to capacity as they opened their doors for memorial services.

Many saddened citizens remained in their homes, quietly listening to the sacred programs and dramatic tributes made by the nation at large.

A very impressive and beautiful Requiem service was held at the Church of the Ascension Saturday morning for the late President, with the choir singing the Requiem High Mass and the Rev. John S. Neal, rector, the celebrant. Representatives of the patriotic bodies and city officials were present with the colors and flags. Mayor Froehlich gave a very fitting tribute to the late President. At the conclusion of the service taps were sounded by Donald Davey from the church garden as the large audience knelt in silence.

Special prayers were said at all Masses Sunday throughout the day at St. Rita's church, and Fr. Leo Scheibel's sermon was a worthy tribute to the late President.

A community memorial service organized and arranged by a group of laymen under the leadership of Postmaster Thomas Durning was held at the First Congregational church Sunday afternoon at four. During the prelude, flags of the patriotic organizations were presented at the front and 100 people marched into the church representing the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Nurses Corps, Order of Eastern Star, Masonic Lodge, F.A.M., Kiwanis, Scouts of America, boys and girls, officials of the city, the fire and police departments.

Dr. W. B. Hiebert gave the invocation and the benediction. The audience joined in two of Mr. Roosevelt's favorite hymns, "O Beautiful for Spacious Skies" and the sailors' hymn, "Eternal Father, Strong to Save." The Scripture was read by Rev. S. R. Sheriff and Miss Christine Stansbury sang Bressan's "Agnus Dei." The memorial address was given by Rev. Frederic Groetsema and the memorial prayer by Dr. Arthur O. Pritchard, which was a fitting finish to the memorial as observed by Sierra Madre.

Requiem High Mass for Pfc. Velasquez Last Friday

Last Friday morning Requiem High Mass was said at St. Rita's church for Pfc. Martin Velasquez who lost his life in the capture of Manila, February 22. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Velasquez of 199 Grove. Fr. Leo Scheibel paid the young man a deserving tribute in his sermon, "No Greater Love Hath Any Man than he Lay Down his Life for a Friend." Representatives of the American Legion post and many friends of the family attended.

Wm. L. Burr Home Soon

Wm. L. Burr, Field Director with the American Red Cross in the Pacific, is expected to be home in the very near future. He will have a deserved rest from very strenuous service which included two major invasions. He will spend his leave with his family at 499 E. Montecito.

Crowds Pass Through Wistaria Fete Gates

Over 1500 people passed through the gates at the Wistaria Vine Fete Sunday and every day sees more people coming to see this greatest of all vines.

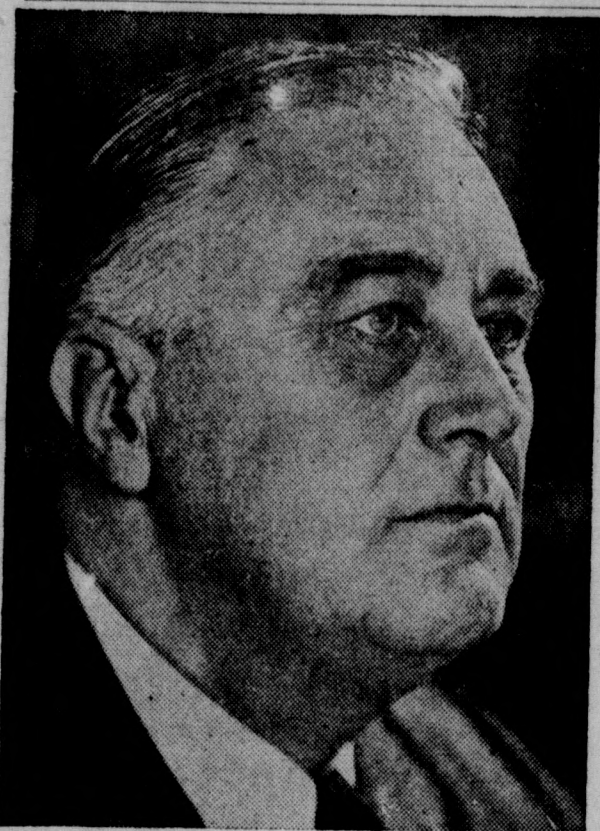

Queen Betty Jo Adams was on deck Sunday to pose for the numerous camera fans who are entered in the photographic contests. The scheduled visit of Dale Evans, Republic Studio star, was cancelled because of the Memorial services for President Roosevelt.

Very Small Percent Tuberculosis Found

The Los Angeles Tuberculosis officials were in Sierra Madre Tuesday to take X-Rays of the children who showed positive reactions to the tests given a week ago, and about 25 adults of the city also took advantage of the opportunity for chest pictures.

A remarkably small percentage of the children showed positive reaction, less than a dozen altogether, which speaks well for the health of our young people and for Sierra Madre as a healthful place in which to bring up our families.

If any active cases are shown by the pictures, Association officials will communicate with the parents immediately.

HARRY S. TRUMAN, who succeeded to the nation's highest office and was sworn in as President of the United States within few hours following the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

A Prayer

A Service in Memory of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Sierra Madre, Calif., April 15, 1945

Almighty God our Heavenly Father, Thou who art King of kings and Lord of Lords, Thou who holdest the destiny of men and nations in Thy hand, we are gathered here to honor the name of our departed President and to join our voices with the multitudes of mourning people far and near.

In a unique way we are conscious of those mystical ties which unite a people with their rulers so that each feels the loss of a friend.

In our great loss we pray for courage. The courage which he had when facing physical infirmity, a national crisis, world catastrophe and personal sorrow and above which he rose triumphant. Because of him may we brace ourselves for the struggles ahead.

We thank Thee for his broad human sympathy; sympathy for the weak, the discouraged, the maltreated, the oppressed; sympathy for his own America but also for Poland, for Greece and for India as well.

We thank Thee for his ability to impart his courage and sense of freedom to others. Born to comfort, yet inspiring the poor and lonely, doomed to years of physical suffering yet imparting the hope of health to thousands of afflicted; hindered in many of his plans, yet holding cheerfully to his ideals; leading a nation stunned by treachery, yet refusing to be stunned himself; placing upon the shoulders of his countrymen heavy crosses, yet himself carrying crosses heavier than any other; calling upon thousands to give their lives for freedom and at last himself joining to give his life.

Thou who hast given Thy life for the world, pour out Thy Spirit and Thy Wisdom on the leaders of the world today. Teach them that if they are to steer their Ships of State into the harbor of Peace they must be guided by Thy compass—the compass of faith and hope and love. Make the example of our Captain a wholesome guide to them in this trying hour.

Extend Thy Almighty arm to bless and sustain those national leaders who gather at San Francisco in the near future, that their deliberations may be fruitful of such plans as shall make for an ordered world founded on justice and law, righteousness and peace.

Bless him who takes the guidance of our beloved country into his hands at this time. Sustain him by wise counsels and a true faith in Thee, that he may lead us as a people along paths that make us worthy to be a leading nation among the family of nations.

Thou who art the comfort of the sorrowing, bless, we beseech Thee, the family and friends of our departed President. Endure them with that peace of mind and resignation to Thy will which Thou alone canst impart and which gives us that rest of soul, which nothing in this world can give and nothing take away.

We thank Thee for his devotion to the Christian church. We think of him as a devout worshipper, as a communicant and as an official in the Church of Christ. In company with thousands of laymen throughout the world we would take inspiration from him for the building up of that wondrous organization, the Church of Christ.

And so, Heavenly Father, who didst give Thy Son to be crucified for the salvation of the world, guide us that by the sacrifice of our sons and leaders, we shall be saved from future wars and shall live in peace.

All this we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior, Amen.

Essay Contest Winners Announced by Judges; 100 Papers Submitted

Interest High in School Circles

Exactly 100 essays were turned over to the judges in the United National Clothing Collection Essay Contest which closed Monday morning at 9 o'clock. The contest was planned and sponsored by the special events chairman of the Kiwanis project, Mrs. Alice Floyd.

The judges, Harlan Ware, General Young and James Richardson have high praise for the 100 young people from the schools of the city. As a whole the papers were well written, good spelling and many original styles of presenting "Why Must I Share What I Can Spare that They Can Wear" which was the subject theme for the contest.

From the markings of the Judges first prize went to Ginger Timmons, 8th grade, public school; 2nd prize to John Woehler, 6th grade, public school; 3rd prize to Georgia Cook, 8th grade, public school; 4th prize to Patricia Owen, St. Rita's; 5th prize, Patricia Sheehan, St. Rita's; 6th prize, Ann Tremaine, public school.

The judges made honorable mention of the essays submitted by Virginia Brennan and Nancy Welch of St. Rita's and from the public school, Merritt Williams, Bette Ogg, Calvin Floyd and Sonya Cohen.

We take pleasure in noting a few of the comments on the prize-winning papers as they impressed the individual judge. "Outstanding because well organized, well written, persuasive."

"Intelligently done." "This youngster was inspired." "Opening arresting." Interesting, neat, concise."

School Open House Next Week

Before the coming week is over, Sierra Madre will be more conscious of the splendid work being carried on at our public schools, for April 23-27 has been set aside as Public School Week. Supt. Kormseler and staff have issued invitations to all parents to visit the schools during the week and observe the operation of the school program as it is practiced every school day. This will be the official "Open House" at the school.

Thursday afternoon, April 26, at the regular P.T.A. meeting, Dr. Arthur O. Pritchard will talk on "The History of Sierra Madre and its Schools."

Friday evening, the 27th, the primary department will be open for observation at 7:30 and at this time prizes for the posters which appeared in store windows this week will be given. The speaker for the evening will be W. Turney Fox, Judge in the Superior Court.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrison are the parents of a daughter, born April 10 at the Huntington Memorial hospital.

Moreland Kortkamp Writes from Isle of Capri

Miss Moreland Kortkamp with her company of USO entertainers is taking a rest and vacation and writes to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Kortkamp, of her impression of a delightful spot, St. Patrick's Day.

"We're in the most heavenly place—the Isle of Capri—and we're having a much needed rest. We are now sitting on our balcony in the sun and my nose is getting more like a cherry every minute. Yesterday we took a little boat and started around the Isle. We went into the blue grotto and I've never seen such clear blue water in my life, when you sprayed the water the drops were like silver. We visited the other grottos—green, rose, and white. The colors of the rocks inside were the most delicate shades of pink, lavender, green gold and all the soft shades of the rainbow. We spent a half hour fishing and caught six fish which we had fried at the most picturesque place away up on the rocks, 50 feet over the water. We had spaghetti, vino, black bread, fried fish and an octopus. It was a little tough and I only took a couple of bites. We had two of the cutest Italian boys guiding us around. Johnny sang to us all the time—he knew more American songs than we did. The people here are so friendly and gay, they don't seem to have a care in the world.

We rode to the top of the mountain on donkeys and it reminded me of the days we used to go up to Sturtevant camp. While we were at the top a little Italian woman, 68 years old, barefoot and brown, invited us in to her house. She was dressed in a gay gypsy costume with a bright orange bandana around her head. Her name is Carmelina and she is the most interesting character on the Isle. She danced the tarantelle for us and sang in a strained, loud voice. Gabrielle came in (a man of about 60, with silver teeth in front) and danced with Carmelina, singing to the accompaniment of the tambourine.

We spent so much time there we almost forgot to go and see the ruins of the Castle of Tiberius. The old castle and light tower stand in a dramatic spot overlooking a drop of 1500 feet down to the water. The whole place is like a fairyland, and it is such a relief not to have to give shows every day.

John C. Loomis Back at His Office Again

The many friends of John C. Loomis will be pleased to learn that he is back at his desk again and on the job and he says it is good to have his friends drop in and see him.

Mr. Loomis suffered the loss of his right leg in 1937, suffering from an attack of bi-lateral femoral aneurism, which is a rare disease, and John says of course it had to pick on him out of a million people. The same trouble appeared in his left leg later and that was also amputated September 1 last and he is just now getting around with a steel walker and is in hopes soon to be able to navigate with his wooden legs and crutches. He has been cheerful all through his recovery period with never a word of complaint, and says he has so much wood in his legs that he is going to ask Charley McCarthy if he can be his understudy.

Ralph Hurwit Buys Olsen Shoe Store

Announcement is made that Ralph Hurwit, 203 Santa Anita Ct., has purchased the repair machinery, equipment and fixtures of the Olsen shoe store and expects to open an up-to-date store on or before May 1.

Mr. Hurwit has lived in Sierra Madre for the past nine years, has a wife and three children, and is well known here and his friends predict for him a successful venture. He is experienced in the business, having been with the Solnit Shoe Co. in Los Angeles for 10 years. For some time he has been in defense work, now being lead man in Dept. E with the Day & Night Mfg. Co. at Monrovia.

He will have an entirely new line of shoes, the former stock having been sold to an Azusa merchant, and will specialize in children's well Oxfords and high shoes, men's and women's work and dress shoes—in other words a regular family shoe store.

Seventh War Loan drive will start May 14.

Building Permits are High in Sierra Madre

March showed a big increase in building permits issued over a year ago. March 1944, was $2418 and March 1945 was $29,078. The first three months of 1944 the permits amounted to $9248 and the first three months of this year $61,807. Building Inspector W. R. Lees says that building here is equal to that of many cities of twice the size of Sierra Madre.

Recent building permits are: P. B. Crouse, 608 Elm, garage and alterations, $800; V. Miller, accessory building, 91 N. Auburn, $400; R. M. Thayer, 423 Ramona, erect stucco dwelling at 550 Ramona, $3000; Wm. Clouch, 662 W. Alegria, $6000; J. C. Jenkins, 269 E. Grand View, accessory building at 259 E. Attend County Camp and Hospital Council Tuesday

Mrs. Edward Clinton Young, chairman of the Red Cross Camp and Hospital committee, with Mrs. R. C. Lewis, attended the Los Angeles and Orange County Council at the First Congregational church in Los Angeles Tuesday. Wonderful movies were shown of the Red Cross work from the battle front on through to rehabilitation. The ladies said they never realized that Red Cross was so near to actual combat but the pictures showed the Red Cross "At His Side" from the time he was wounded before the smoke and debris cleared. They felt the Red Cross workers and chaplains were just as much soldiers as the enlisted men and officers.

Incidentally, while writing of the Camp and Hospital Committee work, the following quotation from Red Cross Headquarters gives a good picture of the efficiency of our local chairman, Mrs. Young, and her assistants: "We know and your reports proved, that for a small chapter your group ranked tops in this Council and possibly Pacific area for accomplishment and work completed."

MRS. AMERICA MEETS THE WAR

Don't be too liberal when using the pepper shaker if your supply of this seasoning is getting low. There's less pepper available for 1945 than there was last year. The large stocks of the spice we had on hand when the war started have gradually been lowered, and very little is being imported now. During April, May and June, packers will be allowed to distribute for civilian use only 25 per cent of the amount they had during these same three months.

In 1941, with the result that many grocers' shelves may be bare of pepper.

Fish is becoming more and more prominent in the American diet, when seasonal meat supplies get tighter. The seasonal North gets in ceiling prices for fish. Atlantic and Pacific effect for have just gone. You'll be paying several months' worth of a pound from two the winter prices. The less is the same as they are last summer, with the one exception of lemon sole fillets which are slightly higher.

What to Expect When Visiting Nurse is Called

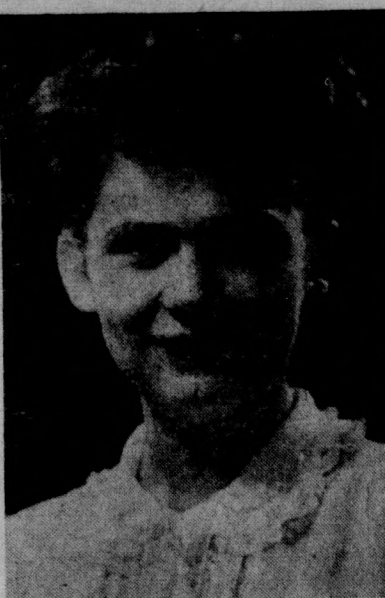

That the citizenry of Sierra Madre may realize more fully the value of the Visiting Nurse program, inaugurated by the local Red Cross Chapter, the following data will clarify the situation.

Your Visiting Nurse will go from home to home, to carry out the doctor's orders; to give skilled nursing care and treatment; to teach the patient or some member of the family to give necessary care in her absence; to instruct expectant mothers—and fathers, too—in infant care before the baby is born and afterwards; to help teach mothers how to feed their families and other essentials of healthy living; to help decrease loss of working time for industrial employees who are sick or who need counsel about health problems.

What do you pay per visit? You pay $1.50 for care of one patient. This charge may be modified, according to the family's ability to pay. The Visiting Nurse is on call from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The nurse will be sent in response to every call and will make the patient comfortable. Treatment can be given only upon an order from a physician.

Your visiting nurse is a graduate, Registered Nurse who has had public health training.

For all information call your local Red Cross.

"Post-War Flying," by Miss Engelbrecht at Woman's Club

Because they had to do the impossible, American pilots and transport planes in three short years have built a wartime network of airlines covering the earth. How these multitude million miles of war airlines and the men who fly them will affect our peacetime industries will be discussed before the Sierra Madre Woman's club by Miss Vivian Engelbrecht on April 25 at 2 p.m. The only woman attached to the Douglas Aircraft speakers' bureau, Miss Engelbrecht will talk on the subject, "When Johnny Comes Flying Home."

Among the phases of postwar flying to be discussed by the speaker will be the need for more airports, the tempting possibilities of vacation and time-saving business trips by air for the average man and his family, and how air transportation will probably affect the merchandising field.

Miss Engelbrecht has long been associated with the aircraft industry and numbers among her personal acquaintances many leaders in this gigantic new industry. This background, together with her dynamic delivery and cultured manner, combine to make her an outstanding platform personality.

He has been in the service over four years and crossed the equator on the Atlantic, February 29, 1944; crossed it again on the Indian Ocean March 20, 1943, and again on the Pacific Christmas Day, 1944. His ship was engaged in hunting submarines in the Atlantic, in the Philippines, and assisted in providing air support for the Iwo Jima invasion, besides other important duty. Aratin will be reassigned to a new ship as the one on which he was formerly berthed is now at Okinawa.

Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Penn are in receipt of a letter from their son Robert Penn, Petty Officer 2/c, that he is in Norfolk, Va., just out of the hospital where he was ill with scarlet fever. He is a radioman and has been in the service for two and a half years, 19 months in the South Sea Islands on a sub-chaser. He is slated for re-assignment in the near future. He has enjoyed seeing Wm. Dyche, Wm. Thayer and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gallion, all Sierra Madreans, who are also at Norfolk.

Mrs. Jennie Haines of Windsor Lane has received several letters from her son, Carlos Condaleria, while he was enroute to the Marianas. He told of the small bag containing soap, shoe polish, cigarettes, cards and candy presented by the American Red Cross as he went on ship board. He entered and won the boxing match for his weight group on shipboard, enjoyed a dance at the USO in Honolulu.

Fennels Spend Afternoon in Early Haunts

Lester H. Fennel and mother, Mrs. Estelle Fennel of Pasadena, received a gracious welcome about town Monday afternoon. Mr. Fennel, just recently arrived from Manila where he was a prisoner in the Santo Tomas prison, is rapidly regaining his health but says he has been kept too busy by his friends to remove a full beard which he is wearing. He called on Rudolph Hartman to tell him what a clever pilot his son, Lt. Rudolph Hartman, was considered in Manila. He met his former school teacher, Eva Moore of 71 Victoria Lane, who guided his education at the ripe age of 10, and he with his mother spent a few reminiscent moments at the Great Vine. Both Mrs. Fennel (the original custodian of the vine) and Mr. Fennel report the bloom to be as beautiful as any year, and that Sierra Madre has a great charm for them.

Sierra Madreans:

If the CLUB 60 continues to serve a meal equal to the one we had last Saturday night, then we have as fine a place to dine as anywhere in the valley.

Real roast beef, no points. Let's support the effort of the management down at CLUB 60, for children will eat like little pigs.

This is the first of a series of thoughtful suggestions.

and Things!

G-r-r-oark!

It is a good thing I am securely anchored here, or the wind would have blown me right out the back door last week—it must be unusual to have so much wind and cold weather this late in April; shall I ask the Chamber of Commerce?

I overheard a young matron say to another, "You know this is the week we should observe being kind to animals. I am going to be especially kind to my husband. I have always heard kindness brings its own reward."

How many of you people remember when—come spring—you had to take sulphur and molasses for a tonic. In California we don't have to do that because we have green vegetables the whole year around. Molasses contains a lot of iron—this is easily replaced by eating some of those nice big artichokes we have here—they are point-free—and almost a meal in themselves! Children like them too!

Have you looked at the back of the vegetable stand where I sit—the beets and turnips and spinach are so nice. (Pop gets them directly from a farmer in the valley.) Pop Eye could really eat this spinach.

Turnip Greens and Corn Bread are considered quite a delicacy Down South. Dromedary Corn Bread Mix does not require points and is really delicious.

Pop worries and puts forth more effort than you would ever know trying to keep a representative stock on our shelves so that customers will not be disappointed or hungry when they shop in our market. It is true we haven't all varieties in all lines but we are doing our best to get merchandise.

Try our cooked foods in the Delicatessen — also frozen foods—point free.

In closing I would like to quote a part of one of the most beautiful poems ever written:

"And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away."

Fine article by Harry Burke telling of the work of Col. H. B. Hersey, "America's Foremost weather prophet," now retired and living on E. Laurel. "Col. Hersey," he said, "has put Sierra Madre on the map by making it a U. S. Weather Station, and the envy of every small city in Southern California. He gathers his data, which is sent out from Los Angeles, from where it goes to every news distributing agency and then to all the daily newspapers, and Sierra Madre's fine climate is in a prominent place. So much so that Beverly Hills and a score of other cities have pulled wires from here to Washington to be included, offering to pay for a station and equipment, mindful of the advertising value. "After visiting many countries from the tropics to the Arctic Circle, Col. Hersey selected Sierra Madre as having the climate he liked best of all."

PEN SKETCHES

By LEE MCCARTY

DEYONSKI

The man had never been tattooed before. He squirmed under the buzz of the electric needle, and a small trickle of blood collected in a ruby drop and fell from his arm onto the Parisian rug on the floor. The tattooer glanced at the German official and wondered why a man so great should wince at sight of his own blood—this man who had rocked the world. In another few minutes the job was done. The German officer looked down at the U. S. Navy anchor on his arm, and when the blood was wiped from the inscription below it, read:

"Ivar Deyonski
United States Navy
1940-45"

Remember Pearl Harbor!"

Ivar Deyonski motioned for the tattooer to retire from the sumptuous room—a room emblazoned with swastikas and a colorful portrait of Hitler—to the rear door. The man wore an expression of deep puzzlement upon his face.

He picked up his tattooing instruments and his tin of dyes, bowed and then raised an arm in Hitler salute, and started for the door. He never reached it. Deyonski drew an automatic from his belt and fired point-blank at the retreating back. He then hurried forward, picked up the paraphernalia of the dead man and threw this into an official brief case of the Greater German Reich. He stopped to the desk and pushed one of the buttons. Almost instantly a Captain of the Guard appeared.

"Take this dead man away," ordered Deyonski sharply. "He was a traitor."

A month elapsed. Deyonski watched his arm heal and rubbed the skin over the tattoo daily to age its appearance. He was always at his headquarters. German officials continually day and night came to see this man and spoke apprehensively of the steady Allied advance. But tonight Deyonski was alone. He had posted strict orders he was not admitting anyone no matter his rank. The sounds of distant battle, the rattling of glass in the window frames made him nervous. He continually glanced at his watch. Finally he got up from his desk, crossed the large room and entered the conference quarters. Beyond the long polished table hung a portrait of Bismarck. This was roughly pushed aside and the safe opened. Deyonski must have taken at least $250,000 in American currency from the vault. This he placed in a money belt around his waist. He also took a letter from an envelope and read it carefully, yet hastily to make sure it was written in Polish:

"Dear Son, we were so happy to hear you are all right. No matter what we read in the papers I told your father over and over again God would take care of you. . . But it has been difficult. Sometimes an awful fear takes hold of me, but your dad has a way of dispelling what is only an ugly imagination. . ."

"O yes, I saw Mary yesterday. She had David and Irene with her. They were dressed so cute! My. How they've grown. You wouldn't know them. David looks more like you every day, and I told Mary, Irene had your eyes. We had a happy quarrel over this. I suppose Mary has a right to claim some of the resemblance in your family. . ."

Deyonski looked at the envelope once again before putting it into his pocket.

Ivar Deyonski
U.S.S. Marblehead
c/o Fleet Post Office
San Francisco, California

He thought about the telephone and wondered if any of his underlings would dare listen in. He took up the receiver and snapped to the military operator a code number. He glanced at his watch. It was exactly 2:00 a.m. Then a voice came over the wire and Deyonski said he would arrive on the hour. He wanted the motors warmed up. Had anyone visited the spot? The voice said only a small detachment of German scouts. He addressed Deyonski in a most servile military manner.

No time to waste, thought Deyonski, and a tear came to his eye when he thought sentimentally about the Fatherland! Well, to hell with the Fatherland! The law of survival was the greatest of all laws. He hurried to the closet, got out an old suit of dungees (these bore the typical Navy stencil "Ivar Deyonski") along with the more detailed identification tags which he slipped over his neck. Then he fought his way into the tight immaculate uniform and went to the mirror to look himself over from head to foot. He thought he looked a little stuffy. The cape would do the trick. This he threw over his shoulders and seemed satisfied with the results. "Dear, dear Berchtesgaden," whispered Deyonski aloud. A tear gathered in his eye, almost a sob in his throat. A flood of events packed into fanatical years swept through his mind. He blew his nose. He remembered suddenly the words of the Kaiser from the last war: "The army was forced to collapse by the stab in the back from the dagger of revolutionists at home." Then he swore volubly. "The German people are pigs! I have been a fool. I must get out—now!"

He banged open the door so suddenly that it crashed its brass front against a guard and made him howl. The hall was not deserted. Soldier after soldier, all armed with automatic rifles and fixed bayonets, stood rigidly at attention at every door. As Deyonski hurried by, each soldier raised his hand in Nazi salutation. He tried not to show any haste! He returned the salute with the habitual flip of his wrist as if he had even originated it!

When he arrived at the door, he looked down the long avenue bristling with guards and guns and saw his official car waiting. He took one last look at the grey stone walls which had been his home. He told his driver to go straight down the mountain to Underground 15. He said nothing to the burly guard who sat next the driver armed with a deadly machine gun.

Around & About

By EDWARD LLOYD VOORHEES

THE ETERNAL CITY—II. On this 12th day of April, 1945, when steady death has suddenly cut off the career of Franklin Roosevelt, the man whose name had become the symbol of hope for freedom and deliverance from oppression, not only for the mixed populations of all the "occupied" countries of Europe but also for one entire race of a dispersed people, my mind goes back to April 12, 1929. I was staying in Rome, on the first of the three Sabbatical leaves of absence which the generous administrator of a small Eastern college secured for this unworthy deponent. My journal of that time shows that on that day it chanced that I went to the little Protestant cemetery in Rome to visit the graves of those two great English poets, Shelley and Keats.

Like Franklin Roosevelt, both Shelley and Keats were great humanitarians. In his writings and in his life, Keats sought always the principle of Beauty (which means order with harmony) to lift mankind above the petty and the ugly. That is why today, 124 years after his death at age 26, every high-school student in America knows "A thing of Beauty is a joy forever. . ."

Shelley's passion was for Liberty, and he was a champion of the Four Freedoms a hundred years before that phrase was coined. In his "Revolt of Islam," "Prometheus Unbound," "Hellas," and "Ode to the West Wind" Shelley not only shows that love of beauty which inspired Keats, but through them all the reader is kindled with Shelley's passion to free the human spirit everywhere from the shackles of moribund institutions, degrading superstitions and political tyranny. In the best and true sense of a much abused word, Shelley was a radical—that is, one who attempts to get at the root (radix) of the evils of the world.

Like Keats, Shelley died young—barely 30. Perhaps that is why they are the poets of youth. They never grew "old and crabbed and wise." And that is why their writings will continue to fire the imagination and kindle the love of freedom and beauty in generations of future young people as they have in the youth of the past and present. When the young people of this generation get through with their fighting, dying and wasting away in prison camps, the survivors will come back not only to their farms, their business and their test tubes, but also to the writings of the poets and dreamers who will confirm their belief that this can and must be made a better and a fairer world to live in. This was the creed and motive of their Chief, who gave his life for it. May he and they be not disillusioned and betrayed!

Rather surprisingly, Keats was a fighter, too. One of his schoolmates recorded that Keats "would fight any one, morning, noon, and night." Short and sturdy, he once found a larger boy ill-treating a cat. Keats interfered and there was a stand-up fight that lasted an hour, in which the great oaf came off a bad second, with Keats "administering a sound punishment." Shelley, slightly the older of the two, greatly admired the poetry of Keats, and the year the latter died Shelley wrote and published his "Adonais," a tribute to Keats and one of the five great elegies in the English language. So when Keats died in Rome, and Shelley a few months later was drowned in a storm while sailing with a friend in the Gulf of Leghorn, it was fitting that their remains should find rest only a stone's throw from each other in a quiet corner of the Eternal City they had loved so well.

And there I found their graves on that sunny 12th of April. Shelley in life had written of this spot: "It might make one in love with death to think that one should be buried in so sweet a

FIRE FLAMES

How long will Sierra Madre's Volunteer Fire Department last? As a volunteer fire department it will last only as long as there are enough men vitally interested to keep it efficient. When this necessary interest wanes to such a degree that the members only attend drills and meetings often enough to retain their membership, then Sierra Madre is going to be forced to maintain a regular salaried fire brigade. To many of the firemen, now active, this will be the "last straw" and very undesirable. To the taxpayers, it will mean a much more expensive fire protection. From this can be seen the necessity of keeping an interest. This means the co-operation of everybody concerned, including the City Council. It will mean that very soon, a large number of young men will have to be encouraged to become firemen. This, because many of the men who have been so active for the past 20 years are either leaving the territory or retiring on account of age. It is really something for the public to be thinking about in a very serious way.

To time the speed of the State truck, the drill took the firemen to the far north end of Auburn Ave. Some difficulty, due to the new equipment, was experienced. Joe Grippi, our genial cavalier of the Hawks tribe, struggled with strenuous effort to avert words that were not befitting (before spectators) as he tried and tried to connect the wrong way a recently bought "four-way." Capt. Brown was not so inclined with words, but he was troubled getting the truck located at a proper angle so that Bill Estes could join the very rigid suction hose to the fire plug. All agreed that a softer hose would have been more convenient. Because there was so very much hose strung on the street, George Norris' name was heard from different directions. He is famous for using plenty of hose—something he has not been able to live down.

The American La France truck was driven by Jerry Fairfield to the scene of the drill. He is one of the men who takes his shift at night. These men must be acquainted with the driving of the equipment. With such "old-timers" as Steinberger, Lange, Liscombe and Newbery to watch him, he could be excused if he displayed some nervousness. None of the above critics objected for an instant to ride with Jerry when the Chief ordered them to return to the station for "stand-by" duty. It really was a very cold evening to be on the outside playing with cold water.

An attempt is being made to revive the interest formerly shown in the Triple F organization. It is hoped that the regular firemen will take an active interest.

The sidewalks of the business district during the late wind storm looked as if the broom crew was either on strike or had quit. The doorway of the fire station is certainly an ideal opening for the landing of much debris picked up by the whirlwinds, leaves, newspapers, seed and all sorts of branches. If the winds come unexpectedly, there is little that can be done to prevent the fire engines from becoming coated with dust and debris. To attempt to sweep or clear the floor while the wind blows is like sweeping grains of sand at the beach. It blows back in your face.

Now is the time to make sure that there is not going to be any dry growth close to any structure. If allowed to stay until later, it will be much more difficult to remove. If we are going to keep down the fire loss, we must keep down the weed growth. Keep the FIRES OUT.

HEART DISEASE THE NO. 1 KILLER

Blood pressure is the force that keeps the blood circulating. The amount of pressure is determined both by the drive exerted on the blood when the contracting heart squeezes, or pumps it, and by the resistance offered by the blood vessels.

When the blood pressure encountered within the blood vessels becomes too high, it places additional strain upon the muscles of the heart which have to do the pumping. If this is long continued, the heart muscles adapt themselves for the performance of their heavier tasks by enlarging. Such an enlargement, if within normal limits, is natural and harmless; in fact, as we grow older our heart ordinarily does grow larger.

If, however, the blood pressure remains excessively high, even the enlarged heart muscles may ultimately become unequal to its tasks. This tends to use up the heart reserve. Another name for high blood pressure is hypertension, and the ultimate effect of long-standing, aggravated high blood pressure is a condition called hypertensive heart disease. This form of cardiac ailment develops during the later decades of life, and can become progressively serious. It accounts for a large share of heart diseases in middle life and old age.

Many different causes bring about an elevated blood pressure. There is sometimes a hereditary or family tendency toward this condition. Overweight, certain forms of kidney trouble, various other bodily disorders, and worry and other emotional states may be contributory factors.

The most frequent single cause back of too high blood pressure is hardening of the arteries, otherwise known as arteriosclerosis. There is reason to believe that long-continued elevation of the blood pressure may, in turn, produce or aggravate the hardening of the blood vessels. In other words, either condition can lead to the other.

It should be noted that these two conditions—high blood pressure and arteriosclerosis—may exist, then, either independently of each other or in combination.

When you go to your physician for a periodic health examination, he usually measures your blood pressure. As people grow older their blood pressure, as we have intimated, is likely to increase somewhat. In other persons the reading fluctuates from time to time. Only a physician can interpret the significance of any given pressure. This he has to do in the light of various other factors.

(Please Note: Further information of heart disease may be obtained by writing to Department 310, the Los Angeles County Tuberculosis and Health Association, 117 West 9th Street, Los Angeles 15.)

Along the Union Pacific main line—between stations—a signal flashes red. The train slackens speed and stops. The engineer grabs the whistle cord... one long and three short blasts. That's a signal to the flagman. It is his duty to give adequate warning to any train following. To do so, he walks a sufficient distance to the rear to insure full protection.

This is one of the many precautionary measures taken by Union Pacific—and other railroads—to protect passengers and freight shipments.

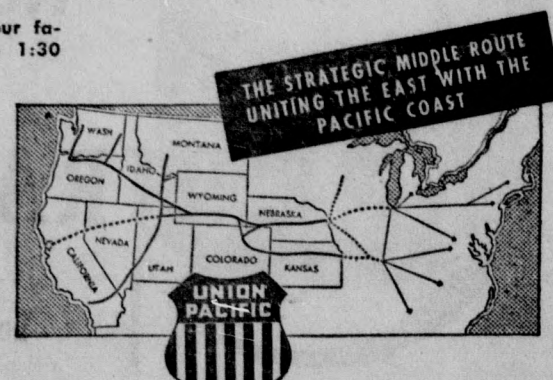

Safe transportation becomes increasingly important in wartime. Trainloads of troops and essential materials are constantly on the move over Union Pacific's Strategic Middle Route uniting the East with the Pacific Coast.

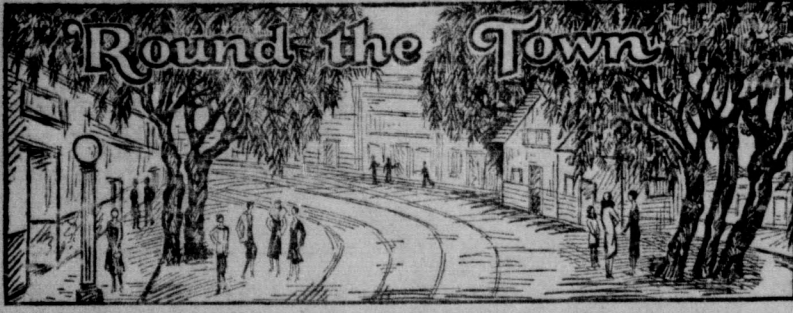

Just as the flagman protects his train, so is it the job of all Americans to provide for future security by buying bonds and saving them. Thus we can help stabilize industry and encourage the American trait of individual enterprise and initiative.

Suggested Prayer for Coming Months of World Crisis

Mrs. Lois Damon, taking a needed rest at Bercara Lodge, Pawnskin, writes of the thrill of a snow storm in the forest. She called it "Nature's Fete," although the natives waiting for summer were not so thrilled. She sent down the following prayer which she hoped men and women of goodwill would engage in during the next few months of crisis: I link myself through the Lord of Love.

With those who live in love,
And with pure intent serve the kingdom.

To Christ and His universal reign upon the earth
I give the full measure of my days,
All I am, all I shall be.

So to live is to find eternity in the midst of time,
So to love is to dwell in Christ,
So to serve is to be Christlike
And walk the lighted way to the transfigured life.
So may it be,
And help me to do my part.

Around and About

low, and the tall, pointed cypresses, half hiding the scattered ranks of white marble shafts of the tomb stones along the rising terraces, threw long funeral shadows across the sun-lit, flowering earth. The songs of mating birds and the great red and white blossoms of the luxuriant camellia trees made those shadows and that silence poignant by the contrast of life with death. At the top of the last terrace, almost against the old wall and only a few feet from the 1900-year-old Pyramid of Caius Cestus, I came upon the grave of Shelley, with its simple slab of white marble, slightly discolored with gray, on which one reads "Percy Bysshe Shelley—Cor Cordium (Heart of Hearts), the dates of his birth and death (1792-1822), and the fitting lines from Shakespeare's "Tempest": "Nothing of him that doth fade, But doth suffer a sea-change into something rich and strange."

"Around the slab are little trees of myrtle six inches high, and at its head grows a potted primrose. To the right of Shelley's grave and united to it now by the roots of a great cypress is the grave of the poet's friend, another great-hearted Englishman, with this inscription: "Edward J. Trelawney, died in England Aug. 31, 1881. Age 88—These are two friends whose lives were undivided; so let their memory be, now they have sided under the grave; let not their bones be parted, for their two hearts in life were single-hearted." Between their graves grow violets and a palm.

"Down the hill a stone's throw, in a corner near the Gate of St. Paul, where the road to Ostia pierces the ancient wall, is the grave of John Keats and that of his friend Joseph Severn, the painter—the only person present when the poet died in that little upper room off the Piazza di Spagna in Rome. Their graves are shaded by two laurel trees and a huge and beautiful umbrella pine. On Keats' plain tombstone is carved the epitaph he composed for himself: "Here lies one whose name is writ in water." But on the stone wall rising between the foot of the grave and the old moat which borders the cemetery is fixed a portrait medallion of the poet, with the following acrostic tribute, engraved and unsigned:

"Keats! If thy cherished name be writ in water,
Each drop has fallen from some mourner's cheek
A secret tribute which all heroes seek
Though oft in vain—for dazzling deeds of slaughter Sleep on for epitaph so meek."

Safety Patrolman
A vigilant "Safety Patrolman," with an electric eye that can see certain invisible gases and vapors, has been developed to warn of dangerous concentrations of these compounds in the atmosphere of manufacturing plants. Known as the ultraviolet photometer, the instrument is so sensitive that it can detect one part of carbon disulfide, for example, in a million parts of air.

Dirk Cable Comments

Of the excellent recordings recently to come from Columbia Studios, my favorite is, Beethoven's Overture to Goethe's drama, "Egmont." From the first restless, fateful chords until the dramatic climax this truly great music breathes defiance and rebellion.

The finest interpretation of this work can be obtained on a Columbia Masterwork by the Vienna Philharmonic, Felix Weingarten, conducting.

Not Long to Write "Finis," Gossweiler On Luzon Says

With the 38th Division on Luzon, "Our Mortar section got the credit for knocking out a heavy Japanese weapon which was firing on our route of supply," Pfc. B. M. Gossweiler of Sierra Madre, told an Army combat correspondent.

Gossweiler, a member of a light mortar section in the 151st Infantry, was describing how his unit eliminated the big Japanese 120-mm. mortar in a Western Luzon mountain pass.

"It didn't take us very long to write finis to the position," Gossweiler said. "We fired only a few rounds to silence the mortar," he concluded.

Pfc. Gossweiler, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Gossweiler, 62 Olive St., Sierra Madre, has been overseas 15 months, and is a veteran of the battle to liberate Bataan, and mopping-up operations on Corregidor. He now holds the Combat Infantry Badge, Philippines Liberation ribbon, and the Asiatic-Pacific theatre ribbon with two campaign stars.

Pays to Know Your Onions In Planning Victory Gardens

Large Onions Grown From Onion Sets, Harvested in August.

Most Victory gardens grow onions from sets. These are merely dwarfed onions, grown last year in crowded rows which prevented them from developing normal size. They are grown from the same seed that produces large onions.

Their advantage over seed is in the time they take to grow to usable size. They will produce green onions in three weeks, and mature onions in three months.

From 15 to 40 pounds of large onions can be grown from a pound of onion sets which do not average over three-quarters of an inch in diameter. To grow large onions, sow small sets on each deep, and to grow spring or green onions, to be eaten before bulbs begin to form, sow larger sets two or three inches deep.

Spanish and Bermuda onion plants are started in the southern states, pulled up when as large as a lead pencil and shipped north to be planted in gardens. They should be fresh and green when you

Free Blooming Flowers Best for Victory Garden

Victory gardens are essential, but that does not mean that landscapes should be uprooted in their entirety; or that flowers must not bloom for the duration.

Flowers are real builders of morale; even in England, during her darkest hours, it was not felt wise to banish flowers from the countryside. A few flowers, with their color and perfume, will greatly enhance the value of your Victory garden.

Varieties that require a minimum of space, yet produce a profusion of bloom should be selected. Wild growing vines that trespass across an entire garden should be discouraged. Specimens that produce a huge mass of bushy growth should be kept in mind for after the war. Plants that grow easily, requiring little care, water or fertilizer are the ones to select. There are many of these available providing all the colors of the rainbow.

The nasturtium has won its popularity honestly. It possesses a lengthy blooming season and re-seeds itself year after year. Hundreds of flowers may be produced on a very few plants and the colors contrast pleasingly with the attractive foliage. It does well in almost every type of soil. The plant seems able to withstand any sudden changes in weather. The orange and red varieties are most brilliant, and the yellow varieties are effective in combination with blue.

Sweet peas keep for many days after being cut and in the outdoor garden a row of them along a fence will hide an unsightly back-garden.

The soil for sweet peas should be worked thoroughly to a depth of eighteen to twenty inches. Chipping or scratching the seed will guarantee faster germination. Sweet pea fertilizer should be thoroughly incorporated with the soil either some time prior to planting or after the seedlings have become fairly well established.

The seed should be sown from one to one and one-half inches deep in furrows three or four inches deep. The furrows should gradually be filled in as the young plants pursue their normal growth. For best culture of sweet peas the ground should be kept fairly moist, a condition that also prevents soil caking. Cultivation may become necessary.

sary later in the season to maintain the soil in a friable condition. Cut the flowers constantly as the seedling process consumes tremendous energy which is diverted from flower production.

For pungent perfume the carnation is hard to beat. Moreover it's fairly free-flowering and makes no excessive demands on the busy gardener. Carnations may be propagated from seed or from slips. The Chabaud type flowers just about six months after sowing.

A sweet soil and one that possesses excellent drainage satisfies this flower. Stem cuttings should be started during the spring months and should be just about four inches long. They start quickly if put in sand and will take root in four to five weeks.

Other varieties of flowering plants that may be incorporated in your Victory garden include: Chrysanthemums, delphinium, gerbera, marigolds and scabiosa, as well as many natives that are suited to their own localities. At any rate don't be without flowers this year. They will add color and fragrance to your garden and your morale will go up one hundred percent.

Onion Sets Grow Well in Every Garden Month

Many people do not quite understand just what onion sets are. Actually they are seeds that have been planted very closely and then dug before they've had a chance to mature. The sets look like the bulbous section of a common bunching onion. They vary in size from a large pea to a lime. When they attain the latter size they are not considered very good sets. Obviously it is more satisfactory to plant small sets. This is true because onion sets are sold by the pound and the quantity of a common set in a pound would be small. A pound of small sets, by the same token, would be quite numerous and the customer would have more sets to plant.

An average loam should suffice for onion sets but the ground should not be too heavy. Such a compost makes it difficult for the bulbs to expand, normally and scabiosa, as well as many natives that are suited to their own localities. At any rate don't be without flowers this year. They will add color and fragrance to your garden and your morale will go up one hundred percent.

Bake Pears
Bake some of those pears. They should be brown and sweet and served chilled with sweet cream and a sprinkling of nutmeg.

Cleaning Toll
Every year about 300 people are killed, and 1,000 injured, in home fires and explosions due to the use of flammable cleaning fluids.

WHAT CAN YOU SPARE
THAT THEY CAN WEAR?

RIGHT NOW, 125 million innocent men, women, and children in war-torn European countries alone, are in pitifully desperate need of clothing. If every American family will make this week "CLEAN-OUT-YOUR-CLOTHES-CLOSET WEEK," enough spare clothing, shoes, and bedclothes will be obtained to go far toward relieving the suffering of these people. Will you help? Then call your local UNCC Committee for full information.

Movies Being Made of Harlan Ware Stories

Another Sierra Madrean, Harlan Ware, is gaining additional fame, as moving pictures are being made of two of his stories. Warner Bros. have just completed "Too Young to Know," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post the first of the year as a serial. Robert Hutton and Joan Leslie are the stars. Mutual Productions, starring, Fred MacMurray, will start shooting this month on another story, "Pardon My Past," written by Mr. Ware, with Patterson McNutt, New York writer and producer. This will be released through Columbia Productions.

A short story from Mr. Ware's pen, "Miss Casanova," will appear in this month's American magazine.

be built and death and disease might easily be the result. Water will purify itself within about a quarter mile through soil, but it isn't a quarter mile down to our water level and if a fissure, rocks or channel should exist or develop, water from cesspools might run into our water supply and pollute it at any time.

If Sierra Madre decides to join the district, Mr. Rawn stated that it is estimated that this city's proportionate share of capital expenditures already made in the construction of the big disposal plant and its system of sewers would be about $110,000. The city would have to lay its own tile within the city limits at a cost of from $1.50 to $2.00 a front foot, he said, and individual owners would bear the cost of laying their tiles to the street connections at a cost of about 75 cents per foot.

The cost per year for interest, repayment of principal, operation and maintenance would then approximate 30 cents per $100 assessed valuation or $7.50 per year 'o the average lot owner, 50-foot frontage, $2500 assessed valuation, in addition to the cost of the laterals. The total cost for joining the district, construction, operation and maintenance, would be about $19 a year for the first year on a $2500 valuation, with decreasing amounts for the nine following years on an amortized basis.

Mr. Rawn stated Sierra Madre has an area of approximately three square miles, 2.94 to be exact. Population per acre, 2.8. Assessed valuation $2,713,195.

He stressed the point that if Sierra Madre is not included and it becomes necessary, and it is almost inevitable, to put in its own system at a later date, the costs will be much higher. He also urged early action, so that plans might be made for construction as soon as war conditions permit.

♦ Mrs. Alta Butler, president of the Civic club, was elected Tuesday as vice-chairman of the Los Angeles Toy Loan Board. Ruth Miles, Gwen Dewey and Rosalie Godwin attended the meeting from Sierra Madre.

♦ Mr. and Mrs. Claude D. Gore of San Diego with their daughter, Mrs. J. C. Butler, have moved into their newly purchased home at 162 Santa Anita Ct. Mrs. Butler is staying with her parents while her husband, James C. Butler, Ch. Wo. of the U.S.N.R., is serving with the Atlantic Fleet.

Ask the Professor

By H. F. Noake

Dear Professor:

Heard a shortwave broadcast from Berlin boasting that their graveyard shifts were taxed to capacity. Would you care to comment on this?

Ans.: Just to add, so are their graveyards, period.

Dear Professor:

Do you think the end of the war will bring total peace?

Ans.: Not for Maggie and Jiggs.

Dear Professor:

Please tell me just what are adenoids?

Ans.: Those I had were a pain in the neck.

Dear Professor:

A grocer charged me one dollar for a package of pancake flour. Could any flour be worth that price?

Ans.: Buck wheat.

Needs More Than Clothes

He is not cold, hungry or wet but he needs something. In helping to take care of the wants of others he tries to get for himself what he lacks most. In a garment turned in to the United National Clothing Drive headquarters recently it was found that both pockets of a coat were pinned shut. When the safety pins were opened one pocket contained new handkerchiefs and socks and the other a neatly self-addressed envelope with a note that the author was lonely and would like very much to hear from the person who received his garment.

♦ The Firemen are planning to organize a soft-ball team and will challenge the Kiwanis, Boy Scouts, F.F.F.S., State Guards, W.C.T.U., Woman's club, Civic club or any other organization to games. They plan to play at the school grounds evenings.
